

Many growers speaking with one voice leads the way. Minnesota Soybean farmer leaders are volunteers who speak out on behalf the farming lifestyle they love. These growers are advocates for agriculture who represent their fellow farmers in policy discussions in St. Paul and in Washington D.C. These men and women believe in a greater cause and take the direction of their fellow farmers to make a difference.

MSGGA strives to speak with one voice to make positive changes that support the future of agriculture. Because soybean checkoff dollars cannot be used for lobbying, it's up to us as farmers to actively let our voices be heard on issues like water quality, biotechnology, animal agriculture and more. Your investment helps to make that happen.

Your best interest is always at the forefront. Because of Minnesota's surplus of dollars, mainly because some of those dollars didn't get spent on the tax bill last year, MSGGA will be looking to steer some of those dollars into the agriculture budget. These include: additional research dollars and mental health dollars. And, a new initiative this year: Minnesota Soy Innovation Campus – a crush facility will focus on biodiesel and specialty soybeans in the Crookston area.
